WTSU athletics will lose over $250,000 this year, Miller says

Athletics at West Texas State University will cost about $300,000 more than it will earn this year, according to figures released last week by WTSU Financial Vice President Hermas Miller.

In issuing the figures, Miller confirmed warnings which came three years ago from then-Vice President Virgil Henson that athletic department deficits would eventually eat up reserve funds at the university.

"This is exactly what Henson was talking about," Miller said. "We can't deplete the reserves to the last nickel."

Miller said the reserves in the university's auxiliary accounts are now to the bottoming out point.

"We have to keep $100,000 in there because our insurance policies (on dormitories) are $100,000 deductible and we have to keep some money in there for emergencies," he said. "There is no other way to pay for unforeseen things except out of our reserves and I can't see that we can let them go under $100,000."

Miller said the deficit budget in athletics has been a fact of common knowledge and concern "for the last 10 years."

"Nobody is against football," he said. "I like it as well as anyone, but I also like to pay the bills too."

In an effort to do that, Miller said, university regents are to meet Friday to review the fiscal situation of the department of athletics.

And, the financial office will also take steps to trim even more a budget which was cut for athletic programs this year at the university.

Figures released by Miller on the financial status of the athletic programs indicate the following:

Total anticipated revenue for athletics this year is to be $575,770. Of that total, football will provide $419,395 in revenue, with $136,590 (perhaps somewhat less, according to Miller, due to this year's crowds) coming from gate receipts; $126,000 coming from guarantees (which Miller said will not be available next year); $91,200 from student service fees; and $65,000 from donations, concessions and program ads and sales.

Basketball has a projected revenue of $100,975 for the year with $44,000 from ticket sales, $3000 from guarantees, $47,400 from student service fees and $6575 from program ads and sales and television income distribution.

Tennis is expected to generate revenue of $8500 for the year, with all funds coming from the student service fees.

Track will provide $17,000 in income, all from student service fees, golf will receive $6600 from student service fees and women's athletics will receive $23,300 from the student service fees.

Expenditures, excluding bonded indebtedness, will total $751,443 for the year, if the budget figures are accurate, according to

The expenditure figures do not include a $130,572 lump taken from the university's instructional salary budget to pay three-

Operation of new schools would up budget 2% , Jacobs figures

The operation and maintenance of two new schools in the Canyon School District will cause an increase in the operations budget of CISD of only about 2 per cent assuming the schools are open in 1979.

Supt. Jerry Jacobs released figures compiled by him and his staff last week, figures requested by The News to determine operations costs for two new schools should a $6 million bond issue pass approval of the electorate on Dec. 9.

Jacobs figures indicate the operation of two new schools would require an additional $113,000.

Hig figures are based on several assumptions:

*That the school district will have 4000 students, about 650 more than in 1975, in four years.

*That facilities must be provided either at the district's present four campuses or at current facilities and the two new schools for the 4000 students.

*That operation and maintenance costs will rise, because of this, in four years to accommodate the new facilities and the additional students.

*That the school district will have a maintenance and operation budget of about $5 million in 1979, up from the current maintenance and operation budget of about $3.5 million.

The figures are also based on the fact, according to Jacobs that as the school district average daily student attendance increases, state funding will also increase to provide teachers and staffing for the students.

The local school board levies taxes only to pay for additional salary supplements for teachers, for extraneous services and functions for students and for debt retirement, Jacobs said. State funds under the basic foundation program provide for direct teacher costs on a per diem per student basis.

"As our ADA (average daily attendance) grows, we will qualify for more program employees and consequently we estimate our increase in enrollment will keep up-to-date employee-wise through state funds and the local contribution will be the amount we pay above the state schedule," Jacobs said. "We think the staffing will be basically the same for four campuses as for six campuses."

Jacobs figured the amount of money which will be required from local sources to pay for additional requirements which might be needed on six campuses as opposed to four campuses with the same number of students in each situation.

By this method, he figured the following:

*Instruction will cost about $50,000 more on six campuses than on four campuses with 4000 students because of additional vocational teachers which would be required at a new high school, he said. Supplies and instructional aids and other equipment and equipment repair would be figured into that total as well as the amount of money the district pays teachers above the state minimum payment schedule.

*Instructional administration costs would be no different, he said, whether the 4000 students were concentrated on four campuses or distributed around six campuses. State funds would supply the same amount either way.

*Library services would require an additional $11,000 over and above what might be expected on four campuses for a six-campus district, he said. That total includes $1000 salaries for two librarians, $2000 for part-time clerical help, and $8500 for additional books and materials.

*Principals would cost about

Civil suit could cost taxpayers $50,000

A civil suit which might or might not cost Randall County taxpayers $50,000 will be tried before a jury Monday in 47th District Court in Canyon.

The suit, the first in history filed by an individual against the county as a governmental entity, was originally filed two years ago by William Leo Russell of Amarillo.

If the jury finds for Russell and against the county, the taxpayers could pick up the damages payments, the total of which is $50,000.

George Blackwell of Canyon, insurance agent for the county, said Saturday he's not sure whether a county insurance policy would cover the damages should the county lose the suit.

Neither did Dist. Atty. Randall Sherrod nor Assistant Dist. Atty. Rick Wilcox know whether the damages might be covered by insurance.

Russell, who at the time was an exterminator, alleges in his original petition that on June 1, 1972 he was injured in an accident with a county road maintainer about eight miles southwest of Amarillo.

"Plaintiff would show that at the time and place of said collision he had slowed his automobile to a stop in the right-hand lane of said roadway in order to permit said road grader, which was proceeding toward him from the opposite direction, to turn around in said road," the petition alleges. "That in the process of turning around to proceed in the opposite direction, the operator of the road grader backed up said road grader and proceeded to back into Plaintiff's automobile with great force and violence.

"As a result of such collision, Plaintiff was caused to suffer serious and permanent bodily injury and damages described hereinafter with more particularity."

The county was negligent, the petition charges, in operating a road grader while backing at a speed in excess of that which an ordinary person would have considered reasonable, in failing to keep proper lookout for vehicles proceeding on the county road; in failing to make timely application of the brakes, in failing to make proper application of the brakes, in failing to maintain proper control of the road grader, and in failing to yield the right-of-way to the plaintiff's vehicle.

Russell contends in the suit that as a result of the collision, he suffered injuries to his neck, back and spine and that since the collision he has been unable to continue the operation of his business.

He alleges that he was required weekly medical care.

Russell seeks from the county a sum of $5000 to cover past and future medical expenses, $25,000 for loss of income due to his injuries, and $20,000 for his "pain and mental anguish."

He also seeks $283 to repair his automobile.

Driver of the motor grader, according to the Russell petition, was Harold Holliday.

Randall County, represented by the Amarillo law firm of Stokes, Carnahan and Fields, denied the allegations in an answer filed two years ago.

The county alleges that Russell himself was negligent in failing to stop his pickup a safe distance from the working road machinery, in failing to sound his horn, in failing to back his pickup as the road grader backed toward him.

Dist. Court Judge Bryan Poff will empanel the jury Monday morning for the trial.

Watkins denies advocacy of athletic downgrading

West Texas State University President Lloyd I. Watkins denied last week he will urge regents Friday to downgrade the university athletic program.

Area news media had charged he has lobbied regents to remove the university from membership in the NCAA and the Missouri Valley Conference for membership in the NAIA.

Watkins said downgrading of the program will be only one of several options he expects regents to consider at their specially called meeting at 1:30 p.m. Friday in Canyon.

The meeting has been called specifically to review the fiscal stability of the athletic program at the university, a program which Financial Vice President Hermas Miller says will lose about $250,000 this year.

"Our option is that the budget has got to balance," Watkins said last week. "I think the board will insist on that.

"How they will go about it will depend on them. Whether it be economies, whether it be NAIA competition, whether it be elimination of some program of the competition, the key issue will be the income and expenditures need to balance."

Watkins said he has not lobbied regents to ensure they choose the option to go into NAIA competition rather than remain in the NCAA and MVC.

"That's what I'm being accused of," he said. "But, I'm just pointing out the options. I'm not trying to push any option to the exclusion of any other.

"One thing I do know. We are no longer in a position to tolerate a situation of deficit financing. That has to be solved. And, I suspect the board will agree with that."

One regent, contacted two weeks ago by The News, would not speculate on the options which regents might take in solving the financial problem in athletics.

Then-Financial Vice President Virgil Henson made public the financial status of the athletic program over three years ago and predicted at that time that reserves upon which athletics could draw would eventually be consumed.

Last January, Athletic Director Gene Mayfield told The News he was working to produce a balanced budget for football at the university.

Figures released last week by Vice President Hermas Miller indicate athletics are losing about $250,000 per year which must be made up out of reserves.

The figure does not include $130,000 which goes to pay coaches' salaries from the instruction budget of the university.

Friday's meeting of the regents is expected to be well attended by area sports fans, including several official organizations.

A group from the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce is expected to attend, to urge that regents not downgrade the program.

Canyon Chamber of Commerce directors will consider Monday whether to attend.

Commissioners seek dismissal

PRPC suit said not justiciable

The plaintiffs in a suit against Randall County commissioners and Canyon city commissioners as well as elected officials of a dozen other Panhandle-area governments concerning membership in the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission "have failed to allege a real, bona fide and justiciable controversy between themselves and said defendants," and answer to the suit filed by Dist. Atty. Randy Sherrod says.

Sherrod mailed the answer for filing in Potter County Wednesday.

In it he alleges that "any declaratory judgment based on the allegations of said original petition would be merely an unauthorized advisory opinion."

Dr. Donald Todd, a West Texas State University violin teacher, along with 15 other Panhandle residents filed suit last month in 47th District Court in Amarillo against Randall County and Canyon commissioners as well as commissioners from Amarillo, Potter County, Parmer County, City of Farwell, Wheeler County, Shamrock, Gray County, Pampa, Deaf Smith County, Perryton, Spearman, Borger and George Loudder of Canyon, executive director of the PRPC.

The suit asks Judge Bryan Poff to declare that the legislation passed in 1971 by the Texas legislature enabling formation of regional planning commissioners is unconstitutional and that the plaintiff officials be restrained from expending tax funds in support of the PRPC.

The answer filed by Sherrod for Randall County's commissioners cites an argument similar to one apparently used in a South Texas federal district court, the judge of which declined to hear the case on grounds it was not a justiciable issue.

Sherrod's answer asks that the suit be abated until the Texas Attorney General is made a party to the suit or that it be dismissed.

The answer alleges that the plaintiffs are not entitled to injunctive relief because they failed to file suit within a reasonable time after their alleged incidents occurred.

Several exceptions are also listed in the answer.

The defendants allege that Todd and his fellow plaintiffs failed to allege what immediate and irreparable injury and harm would be suffered by the plaintiffs should the defendants not be restrained from further participation in the PRPC.

"In particular, plaintiffs have

Says country debt too high

Hightower won't vote tax break

U.S. Congressman Jack Hightower told Canyon residents last week he will vote against a proposed tax reduction bill now pending before Congress and supported by President Ford.

"I will not vote for the tax reduction bill we're talking about now whether or not it is accompanied by a reduction in spending," Hightower declared. "I feel like I'm paying more taxes than I'd like to pay and I'd like to see a genuine reduction in taxes, but not at a time when we owe as much as we do."

Hightower, speaking to a group of well-wishers at a reception here, said he voted against Ford's tax reduction package earlier this year, a package which eventually passed Congressional approval and gave a rebate to all the nation's taxpayers.

"I couldn't see how it would spur the economy to take money out of the market place to give everyone $200," he said.

Concern over the national debt is gaining more adherents in the Congress, Hightower said, particularly among those Congressmen who believe the national debt must be reduced from its current $300 billion mark.

"A great number of members of Congress recognize the fact that we are in a critical situation in financing the public debt in this country," he said. "We've got to turn this thing around as far as governmental expense."

Hightower said the Congress this year seems to have taken on a more economically conservative hue, responding apparently to the concerns of constituents over the national debt, inflation and recession.

But, he had no answer for where to cut the federal budget to reduce spending.

"We can't compromise national security," he said. "We have to keep our defense posture high. There are other obligations that commit the United States in how it is spending its money at home. But, surely there are many ways we can reduce the overall national spending."

Hightower said many members of Congress simply do not understand the nature of the petroleum industry and have passed several bills which will not help spur domestic exploration or increase production.

"There has been much effort trying to keep the price of gas at the pump down rather than trying to keep gas in the pump," he

Fund aids woman

The plight of a woman and her two seriously ill children, abandoned by her husband in Canyon, is typical of the problems encountered almost daily by the Canyon Community Family Services Association.

Mrs. Carmen Hernandez, programs supervisor for the group, outlined the aid given the woman from funds collected by the association, which will be beneficiaries of funds collected in The Canyon News' first annual Empty Stocking Fund.

Donations for the fund are being accepted at both Canyon First National Bank and West Texas State Bank. Names of donors will be published each Sunday in The News.

All funds will go to the CCFSA for use throughout the year in providing emergency relief or long-time help for various families and individuals in Canyon.

One woman who benefited from the services of the CCFSA during the past year was brought to Canyon along with her 3-year-old and her 18-month-old children by a husband seeking work.

Funds from the CCFSA helped put the family up while the husband sought work, but to the dismay of the wife, the husband after working only three days abandoned she and the children.

A local physician administered to the children and CCFSA funds provided for the family until the children were able to travel.

At that time, according to Mrs. Hernandez, the family was purchased a bus ticket to Montgomery, Ala., where the woman had relatives she could stay with.

Another woman, a woman with two boys, was also aided during the past year by CCFSA, Mrs. Hernandez said. One boy had an eye defect which caused his school work to drop, but through the services of CCFSA the woman was taken to the Texas Commission of the Blind which provided treatment, surgery and glasses for the lad, who now is able to see perfectly.

United Way drive needed in city

Canyon needs a United Way drive.

Virtually every town in the Panhandle, from Friona to Tulia, has a United Way drive, a fund-raising campaign under which umbrella monies for various community organizations can be collected at one time, in one fell swoop and with smooth operation.

If Friona can have such a drive, if Tulia can have such a drive, Canyon, too, can have such a drive.

Certainly, Canyon with a 6000-student university probably has more reason to desire a United Way campaign. Last year, for example, local residents forked over more than $30,000 to Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, FFA, FHA, March of Dimes, Cancer Society, American Lung Association, and numerous other organized efforts. Nary a week goes by this year that residents and merchants are not asked to contribute to one good cause or another.

A coordinated fund-raising drive, held once a year, would relieve residents and merchants of the constant drone of money-raisers. It would relieve some of the burdens of the money-raisers themselves, folks who must give of their time to help conduct campaigns.

Frankly, we see no argument against such a drive. Why doesn't Canyon have one? — C.W.

Faculty suffers from athletic deficit

The teaching faculty at West Texas State University could each be handed about $520 check this year if the $130,000 which comes out of the university's instructional budget to pay coaches of intercollegiate athletics were available for true instruction.

If WTSU regents are going to talk about balancing the budget in athletics at their Friday meeting, they will get far from an accurate picture if they don't consider the $130,000 which faculty members lose because the coaches receive three quarters of their annual salaries out of the instructional budget.

Paying coaches, who according to the fall class schedule, teach few if any classes, out of instructional funds is a rip-off.

Coach Gene Mayfield, who received the bulk of his $25,000 annual salary out of the instruction budget, is scheduled for the fall to teach one hour of varsity athletics. Likewise with the other football coaches.

Only coaches David Kent and Bob Kitchens, the tennis and track coaches respectively, do any real instruction outside the varsity fields.

In an age where funds are tight for instruction, where few merit raises and fewer promotions are handed out to professors, where, in fact, several faculty members have been released from the university due to financial exigencies, it is not only bad business but more than a little irksome that funds which might be available to boost faculty salaries are being used to pay for athletics.

Athletics, if the Panhandle wants athletics, should pay its own way and it should, in all fairness, be forced to pick up the $130,000 which is taken from the instructional budget now. — C.W.

Ford NYC plan shows weaknesses

Oddly enough, President Ford's delicate handling of the New York City fiscal crisis, while a successful attempt at helping those who help themselves, is an illustration of the major problem facing the Presidency in the modern era.

As it was with Nixon and Johnson before him, Ford as President functions best and most effectively when dealing with isolated brush-fire-type crises or problems. His handling of the Mayaguez incident, his handling of the possibility of New York City bond default show the strength of the Presidency in handling urgent situations.

But, Ford's successes — like his modern predecessors — are as much damning as they are creditable because they point up the serious lack of power the modern President has, the weaknesses of the office which by design should be one of the strongest of the three branches of government.

The small successes the modern President can muster pale beside the enormous pile of problems which the nation faces and which demand strong leadership for solution, problems such as the energy crisis, the food crunch, inflation and recession. That today the federal government appears no closer to solution to these problems is evidence of the weakness of the President. The sprawling bureaucracy and tremendous and shameful national debt, which proliferate even as Presidents vow to cut spending and lower federal payrolls, are evidence, too, of his lack of power.

Leadership cannot come from a 500-man Congress. It cannot come from a deliberately slow-moving Supreme Court. It must come from the White House. We fear, though, that it cannot, no matter who sits in the Oval Office.

Precisely because of the strength of the 500-man Congress, the power to obfuscate and delay of the vast bureaucracy, and the rapid splintering of America into a nation of individual groups bent on promotion of group self-interest, the President is emasculated.

Is it any wonder we founder? — C.W.

Is his really an enviable record?

Perspective, as Clarence Cosby, Canyon's octogenarian poet, points out eloquently in a letter elsewhere on this page, is a quality of perception sorely needed but apparently lost in an America more concerned with the trees than the forest.

While Cosby addresses himself to perspective concerning the proposed school bond issue here, we think a little perspective is needed in another relevant realm — high school athletics.

We note with horror the story in the latest issue of People Magazine about Tom Saylor, a 33-year-old high school football coach who has undoubtedly reached the pinnacle of his calling. His teams at Hudson High in Michigan have a 72-game winning streak.

Typical high school football fans would, no doubt, envy such a successful result. But, as parents concerned about their children and what their children are to be learning in high school, would they condone the practices used by Saylor to push his teams to victory every Friday night?

In a strangely paradoxical assessment of his coaching technique, Saylor says: "We love our players. We yell and scream at them — a few players have cried — but we try to emphasize the positive."

So engrossed in winning another game has Saylor become that superstitution has taken the place of common sense in his practice regimen. The magazine reports that one player who threw up before every game suddenly one game day didn't throw up and Saylor ordered him to the bathroom with the demand that he stick his finger down his throat. He did and the Tigers keep winning.

Saylor's approach sends us to the bathroom and we won't need a finger down the throat to gag. — C.W.

Moral virtue should be standard

If it is one unwritten function of government to perpetuate itself, and if it is a well-documented tendency for bureauacracies of any stripe to serve their own self-interests, do Americans really have any reason to be shocked by the recent relevations that the CIA, FBI and other covert operators have been spying, tapping and otherwise Big Brothering us?

If Watergate showed us anything, it illustrated that we can no longer afford the luxury of believing that election to Washington office carries with it the mantle of virtue and integrity.

Some men, we all know, are good, motivated by desire to help others, guided by sincerity. Others, we know, too, but seem to forget when thinking of our federal office-holders, are evil, motivated by greed, by lust for power, guided by guile and deviousness.

Proclamation for candidacy for federal office does not amount to a declaration of honesty, even though the electorate seems unquestioningly to choose a candidate to support solely on his political beliefs, his purported solutions to political problems.

The problem in government today is not a political problem. It is a moral problem. It cannot be solved by sending to Washington those whose politics are agreeable, or whose party is preferable. It can be solved in large measure, by sending to Washington those men of local origin whose lives are virtuous, whose scruples are unquestionable.

The credibility crisis in government can be closed only when the electorate put into office those disposed to moral behavior. Demands for moral behavior from men already in office, men whose motives and behavior are questionable, are as fruitless as demands that a serpent sprout feet and legs and crawl rather than slither. — C.W.

NAIA reports are misleading

BY CARROLL WILSON

It is one of those incomprehensible anamolies of nature that God, in His wisdom, has consistently seen fit, when creating sports writers, to issue typewriters but not brains.

The fact was a running joke at the big city paper to the north when I worked there a decade ago, the city editor, a grim no-nonsense sort, noting sarcastically to new reporters as he showed them around the shop and stopped to point at the sports department that "these are sports writers — we lock them up in the basement at night, toss them a side of beef to gnaw on and let them out in the mornings."

I've met sports writers I like. I just wouldn't want my daughter to marry one.

My point is well illustrated by the phenomenal series of articles and editorial columns which have obviously exuded from the typewriters and not the brains of the sports writers on the big city paper to the north in the past week or so.

Because I know some sports writers personally, I can attest to the fact that they're an emotional breed, violently defensive about sport and its place in the hierarchy of important world events and human happenings.

So I had little trouble dismissing their sensational headline last Monday morning which screamed across the page that the West Texas State University athletics program will be plunged into the NAIA after withdrawing from the NCAA and the Missouri Valley Conference.

Sportswriters can't help the way they are, I rationalized.

But, the public should be informed of their infirmities, a task which I take it upon myself as a non-sports-writer herein to do.

Despite the dark warnings of Bob Williams, assistant sports editor at the Globe-News, both in the news columns and in his editorial column, there are two reasons why his contention that the Buffaloes will absolutely be downgraded to NAIA status are not only wrong but illogical and unreasonable.

The first reason is that, again despite Williams' unnamed sources, Dr. Lloyd Watkins, university president, has never intended to put athletics into the NAIA.

He does intend, and rightly so, to make the athletic budget balance.

What Watkins has said, both before Williams' super-duper story and after, is that the budget must be balanced and that there are several options available to assure that result.

One option, but it is only an option and a limited one at that (for reasons which will come later in this column), is certainly downgrading the athletic program, cutting back and going NAIA. That is an option in almost any program anywhere in the university if it is not making money.

But another option, one which would probably be much more likely, is that the university will explain the plight of athletic financing to the Panhandle and simply say: "If you want Missouri Valley Conference and NCAA athletics at this university, then put up the money we need to keep us in the running."

The latter, I would argue, is an altogether more satisfactory option for Watkins, both politically and fiscally, than is downgrading the athletic program. It is an option which, because of these assets, is very likely to be the one chosen by regents when they meet here Friday.

It is simply illogical to assume that the worst of the two options will be taken by the university.

Illogical because Watkins and the regents, if they chose to go NAIA, would bring down upon their heads the kind of wrath Williams in his inept and sensational handling of the situation has already elicited. No reasonable men, men who are more inclined to try to save the athletic program than to dump it, will come in one day in December and decide to go into the NAIA.

They will, logic tells me, look over the situation calmly, listen to the hysterical pleas of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce and other sports fans in the area who come out of the woodwork only when their contributions can be verbal and not monetary, and then say something to this effect: "The athletic department is losing money. We would like to see the university stay in the MVC and NCAA. But, to do so will require a massive amount of outside funding. If Panhandle sports fans want us to continue in the valley and the NCAA, let them provide the financing needed."

Watkins is a sports fan. Besides that, he firmly believes a good athletic program is essential to the university.

Men of such inclinations, men who four months ago extended to Gene Mayfield a five-year contract, cannot reasonably be expected to now turn around and bite Mayfield on the leg, turning his program into mush.

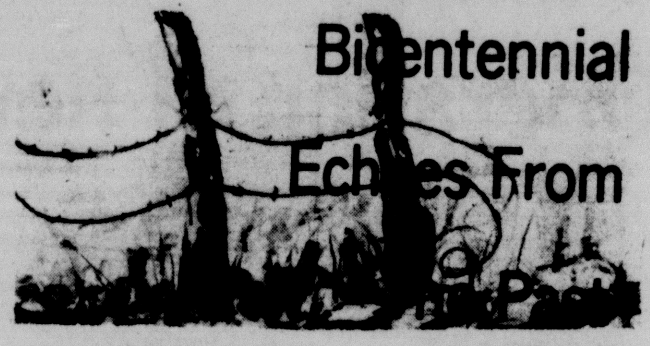
Would any reasonable man, when called upon to review the fiscal problems in athletics at the university, a man who believes athletics essential to the university, voluntarily vote to downgrade the program, knowing, as the regents and Watkins know, that sports fans can be as rabid as sports writers are vapid.

Or would the reasonable man review the fiscal woes, discern that the only logical source for new funds is from those in the region who are willing to put money into the program, and then turn it over to them to help solve the problem?

I think the latter is imminently more logical, or at least more consistent with the workings of the human mind.

I think that is the only viable option available right now, not only because it places the responsibility for financing the program where it ought to be — with the fans — but also because it absolves the regents, who, remember, are only human, from any responsibility if the Panhandle fails to come through with adequate funding.

Viewed in its proper perspective, then, the NAIA controversy is nothing more than a tempest in a teapot, a sensational, if somewhat unlikely, story that has about as much likelihood of bearing fruit as anticipated as the Buffaloes have of going to the Cotton Bowl.



By KATHY GLAZENER

Entertainment in Canyon in its earliest days was varied if not abundant.

Not having a forty-hour week, the resident farmers and ranchers saw first to the maintenance of their crops and herds. If any time was left over, it was usually spent in a constructive way.

Most families devoted free hours at home to reading, sewing, listening to phonograph records or discussing tomorrow's endeavors.

The stereoscopic viewer was a device enjoyed by many young people in the evening. Slides were available for $3.00 a dozen and could be purchased in a series or individual scenic views. All that was required to use the instrument was a kerosene lamp or other source of light, and a few minutes of concentration to read the titles.

A barbecue and dance was the most usual form of county-wide celebration. The first recorded event took place in 1889 to mark the establishment of the new county, Randall, with Canyon as its seat of government. There were speeches after the well attended dinner, and a raffle of town lots.

An even larger barbecue was held in 1898 when the Santa Fe Railroad completed the stretch of track from Canyon to Amarillo. This reduced the otherwise all-day trip to the big city in the north, to a mere 45 minutes.

The new court house, being one of three structures in town, was the center of most organized activity. Dances were held on Saturday night, pausing briefly Sunday morning for church services. On several occasions, however, the dancing did not cease but moved to the roof. When boot heels finally wore holes in the tin roof, it was replaced with tin shingles.

The first revival in Randall County was held in 1890 in Palo Duro Canyon. Later meetings were held in an arbor east of the square and lasted as long as 10 days. Individual donations were the only form of compensation to the visiting preacher, but it was common for the proceeds to exceed $100.00.

At the time of the first local-option election in Canyon, there were four saloons and gambling houses operating near the square. Their contribution to the welfare of the community is questionable though they did serve as an information center for newly arrived settlers. The election was decisive, however, with every precinct voting in opposition of the saloons. Several owners began stocking food and other supplies in an effort to stay in business, but were unsuccessful.

Tent shows visited the city during the summer months and held performances twice daily. They sold candy or various miracle remedies, employed a band, and performed short, harmless melodramas. One of the more memorable productions at the time was presented by the Harley Sadler troupe entitled, "Over The Hills to the Poorhouse."

Parties were held on birthdays or holidays and featured dancing and games. Several married couples to act as chaperones was a routine but strict requirement.

In 1897, the largest and longest party was held at the Hoffman place 13 miles northwest of the city. It was originally a New Year's party, but due to an unforseen blizzard, the 60 guests were forced to stay three days.

Our World

Prayers for our founders

By ANN BROWN

As Americans enjoy this holiday weekend, may we offer prayers of thanksgiving for the discoverers and the founders of our nation who left us such a rich heritage.

There were thousands of the pioneers who enriched this soil with their blood of whom we know nothing because they kept no records.

The little Plymouth Colony, however, was probably typical, and they kept records.

Some 102 courageous souls, in addition to the crew, braved the winter seas in a crowded ship that lacked heating, cooking, and sanitary facilities.

Several died on board ship. Before the year was out, 46 had succumbed to the cold, deprivation, and hardships.

Of the 18 wives, 13 died. There were only 3 couples of which both partners survived.

In 1765, John Adams, our second President, wrote in his diary: I always consider the settlement of America with reverence and wonder, as the opening of a grand scene and design in Providence for the illumination of the ignorant, and the emancipation of the slavish part of mankind all over the earth.

The settlement of America was indeed a grand design; it didn't happen by accident.

It is altogether fitting that Americans pause at this season each year to reflect on the way that we became the greatest, most prosperous, powerful nation in the world, blessed with everything necessary for our enjoyment.

It was a special breed of men and women who came here from all over the world. Many came seeking wealth and opportunity, but primarily they came seeking freedom.

Early Americans were strong, proud, and independent. The only helping hand they wanted was at the end of their own sleeves.

The pioneers shared one thing in common: an indomitable faith in God and in themselves. All they asked from the government was to be left alone.

We complain if the pavement is rough; but without even a path to follow, our forefathers crossed mountains, prairies, and deserts in covered wagons, on horse-

Letter To The Editor

Cosby urges use of perspective on bond issue

Dear Carroll:

Since there is an enterprising group in our midst promoting the sale of a six-million dollar bond package to us folk in Randall County, which includes me, I am downright concerned. The package is labeled: "Quality Education," which sounds pretty good. It is beautifully wrapped, which makes it look attractive; but what is bothering me is just what is included inside the thing. Six million biscuits represents a fair-size hunk of dough, and if this deal goes over, I will have to stir up my share — so will everyone else in the county. The big question in my mind is: Will the stuff we get be worth what it costs? Wanting to know what I get for the money I spend has always been one of my failings.

If the school projects we have financed in the past are indicative of what we may expect of this one, I conclude we may look forward to some more of the same, with extra "fringe benefits," which leads us to feel assured that we will get two new school buildings, modern as tomorrow, that include a "swell" cafeteria equipped with sleek and shiny fixtures, featuring chrome and stainless steel. (Everyone has to eat you know, some for a fee and some for free.) Then the services of a qualified dietician will be required to supervise the preparation of meals so they will constitute a balanced diet — whether the books are balanced or not. Of course there will be a need of cooks to "whomp up" the stuff, and a crew to dish it out — saying nothing of dishwashers and garbage disposal crews to clean up the mess when the meal is over.

Doubtless all needful steps will

Collins critical of ads

Dear Editor,

For the information of Canyon School District taxpayers many persons which were listed above a signature of "Citizens for Quality Education" and which were originally members of "so-called" citizens advisory groups to the Canyon School Board have telephoned me stating that they will vote against the bond issue

Reeves defends ads

Dear Sir:

In a recent letter published in THE CANYON NEWS Mr. Charles Gerald protested the inclusion of his name in an ad paid for by the Citizens Committee for Quality Education. I have written to Mr. Gerald to say that I regret any embarrassment and inconvenience he may have suffered as a result of this ad. I also explained, and will do so again here for the public record, that the membership lists and recommendations of the citizens com-

Kuhlman hits bond issue

To the Editor:

At a meeting held Tuesday night November 25, 1975 at the Canyon Junior High a statement was made that may be the crux of the issue in the forthcoming bond election. Mr. Jacobs made the statement "that a good school trustee needs but two qualifications. Be for education and be a qualified voter". Here lies, in

Fiscal equity urged

Dear Carroll,

Read with interest your editorial "Athletic reassessment long overdue." While I agree with the premise that the WTSU athletic program should function on a cost-benefit analysis, I say we should apply it to all aspects of institutional programs and services. We can go to Canyon High School and Canyon Junior High and apply the same principle. Go to the structure of the administration at WTSU and apply it to our school board, city

Kindergartners at Gene Howe got a taste of an early Thanksgiving dinner and the work that went into preparing it as they cooked a Pilgrim's feast last week. Helped by teachers Mrs. Anita Harp and Mrs. Pam Layman, the youngsters prepared cornbread, toasted pumpkin seeds, pumpkin cooked in brown sugar and spices, cranberry sauce and popcorn, then spread a picnic tablecloth and tried their cookery.

Topic Rehash On Agenda For Council

Canyon commissioners will meet Monday at 7 p.m. at the community center to rehash several questions tabled at the last meeting.

On their second go-around before the commissioners is a review of the cities policy to participate in the costs of developing new subdivisions. This grew out of a discussion at the last meeting to limit the cost of participating in the installation of sewer lifts and now includes other costs, such as paving street intersections.

The second left-over item concerns A.W. Lair's claim for reimbursement for installation of water pipes which he maintains were oversized for his needs.

Also on the agenda is a call for a public hearing on rezoning property owned by A.H. Lindemann in the west part of town, authorization of payment of architectual and consultant fees for the civic complex and review of a speed limit survey on 23rd Street.

City Proposes TPCAC Administer Housing Here

A proposal for Texas Panhandle Community Action Program to administer a rent subsidy project in Canyon is being considered in Washington now.

If the proposal is accepted, then Canyon's application for rent subsidies for 20 existing units for low to moderate income housing will be a step closer to approval, according to Tom Plumlee, city administrative assistant who has been working with the HUD application.

City and county officials have both eyed the HUD grant since the county was notified in July that some $100,000 would be available for rent subsidies in Randall County.

Since July, the amount of money available under the program, which is a part of the Community Development Act of 1974, has shrunk considerably to $22,700 and the county has declined to participate because of the problems of administration.

The city, too, concluded that administering the program would be too much of a strain for the existing staff and the amount of funds hardly justifies hiring an additional employee.

Thus, Plumlee views the proposal for the regional community action agency to administer the program as a good deal for Canyon.

"This would solve our problem," he said. "The city will get the benefit but won't have to administer it."

Under the grant, Plumlee said, the federal government would provide subsidies for low income families to rent existing homes. He said he thought that just homes within the city would be included, but perhaps, with the regional agency in on it, that housing throughout the county would also be eligible.

Plumlee, who talked Wednesday with HUD officials in Dallas, said he was told that the proposal to have the program administered by the regional community action agency would have to be approved first by Congress and that it was now being considered.

County Faces Light Agenda

Randall County commissioners are scheduled to discuss again Monday the possibility of negotiating a three-year contract with Canyon Ambulance Service.

Commissioners will meet at 1 p.m. in the courthouse.

A report on the ambulance service contract with the county is anticipated from Commissioner Paul Lindsey.

Other items on the Monday agenda include:

*Insurance coverage discussion on elected officials.

*Executive session to discuss personnel.

my opinion, the issue of the six million dollar bond election. We have dedicated men looking out for the trees, but who is looking out for the forest. In their search for the well-being of the children, not enough concern is shown for the overall community picture. It is possible to be for education and refuse to vote for a bond issue automatically unless it considers the total realities of the school district situation.

I am for a good environment. Quote House & Home November 1975: "San Diego's champion of slow growth wins in a landslide. Wilson ran on a promise to continue to control growth to avoid leap-frog sprawl." Stopping Amarillo's growth southwest of Amarillo High and letting it pop out at Western and Hollywood would be leap-frog sprawl. I am for the conservation of energy. High school students living next to Amarillo High will have to either drive or be bussed many unnecessary miles. Busing costs will outpace even the increase in building costs. Leap-frog development is very wasteful to all uses of gasoline. The past two years have shown us that we need to group together not fragment. Busing and lack of early control by city planning around Gene Howe has helped foster a rural sprawl. The proposed new high school once again will be outside the city limits and its control. Environmentalists and energy savers, where are you?

I am for Canyon and its well being. If all goes well in the uncontrolled growth of CISD in south Amarillo, Canyon will gain very little, if at all. If it turns sour, Canyon could lose plenty, with higher and higher taxes. Better for Canyon if the education minded people of south Amarillo had moved to the city of Canyon in the first place. We are giving away a trump card without any return in business. Let us also not trade away our larger than average retired population, who were attracted by Canyon's reasonable taxes and other pluses. Canyon Chamber of Commerce and Canyon boosters, where are you?

I am for WTSU. Let Canyon grow and keep its lower housing costs so students will continue to enroll at WT. Lower costs also helps to attract better professors. Continued bad blood between CISD and Amarillo can only hurt WTSU. WTSU needs more, not less, cooperation from Amarillo. WT backers, where are you?

I am for financial stability. Education through experience has shown that bedroom segments of a large metropolitan area most generally get into major school financial problems. Additional houses bring only more problems and not enough tax base to support themselves. Money worriers and taxpayers, where are you?

I am for being neighborly. CISD boundries need not be as close to Happy as they presently are, nor should the school district resist the growth of Amarillo. Good neighbors, where are you?

I am for agriculture. High taxes feed the cancerous growth of rural sprawl. Farmers who can't afford to farm, sell acreages that cause more problems. Let us save the land and the farmers. Farmers and ranchers, where are you?

I am for the rights of the pioneers of the Gene Howe area, many of whom were living there before the school was built. Others holding up progress in new areas across I-27 can only frustrate your desire to remain in the CISD. Gene Howe old timers, where are you?

One of education's most important roles is to solve problems, and I certainly feel that there is a total picture that we are overlooking. This issue is not just another school in Canyon, it is a forest of interlaced problems. We should consolidate our growth by releasing large areas west of I-27 to Amarillo, resolve other problems, then take a hard look at our future needs and build what good schools are needed as soon as possible. If the school board can't resolve these forest problems before election time, then we should ask them to with a NO vote. December 9 will be the last chance for us to control the freeing of ourselves from a lurking monster, hiding west of I-27, who could devour us in a much bigger bond issue, not many years away.

Thanks,

commission — even the county commissioners!!!! If we get brave enough to investigate state and federal programs, we might find many that don't produce a cost-benefit ratio. One reason our schools cost so much now-a-days is that we have asked them to everything for our children.

We need a good athletic program at W.T.S.U. I think this area must look at itself and determine the cost of such a program. Are we willing to pay the cost of such a program? Last Saturday I saw a good football game. The crowd was embarrassing. No one has a right to criticize the future decision unless they are willing to support the program now.

The people in this area need to decide by $, $, $, $ and more $ if they want a first class program. If not — then let it go.

I doubt if we would have athletic programs anywhere, if we applied the cost-benefit principle across the board. Would Canyon High or Canyon Junior High have such a program?

Notice, I am not throwing away usuable paper.

City Is Watching Hereford Gas Bout

When the Hereford city commissioners take up the subject of natural gas rates Monday night, Canyon city officials will be interested.

The neighboring city is considering revising its ordinance to limit the rate of gas procurement costs that can be passed along to the customer by Pioneer Natural Gas Company.

Presently, Hereford — and Canyon — as well as other Panhandle cities, allow the company to pass along to consumers 100 per cent of the cost to the firm of buying gas.

Gas rates in Hereford have risen 262 per cent since Jan. 1, 1974, a period that began shortly before the gas pass through ordinance was approved in March, 1974, according to a news story this week in The Hereford Brand.

Hereford city manager Dudley Bayne calculated that Hereford residents will be saved between $80,000 and $100,000 on their gas bills this winter if the commissioners limit the pass through rate, according to the Brand article.

Canyon commissioners meet the same night as the Hereford board, so observers from Canyon are not likely to be present.

"I'll probably talk to Dudley after the meeting," said Canyon city manager Glen Metcalf.

Metcalf said he didn't plan on sending a representative from Canyon to the meeting.

"I don't think that would be productive," he said.

Bill McMorries, city consultant for both Canyon and Hereford, is scheduled to be at both meetings, but, since Canyon commissioners begin their meeting 30 minutes earlier than the Hereford commissioners, he will appear first before the board here.

Metcalf said he has not spoken to Bayne about limiting the gas pass through rate since an initial meeting held earlier this year. "But I've talked to McMorries a couple of times about it," he said.

Metcalf said he had no idea what he would recommend to Canyon's commissioners until after the Hereford board acted.

"I'm watching it very closely," he said.

Assault Charged

A Canyon resident has pleaded not guilty and was released on $50 bond after being charged with speeding and assaulting a police officer.

Police arrested Bobby Rex Griffin, who gave his address as 1421 Creekmere, on Nov. 26.

Make-up Artists Say Food Critical

The Marlin brothers, Layne and Jerry, agree that it's "easier to make a movie star look glamorous on the movie and television screen" because of the added help their features and complexion receive from stage lighting.

The beauty of the average — woman on the street can be enhanced however by 15 minutes before the mirror, they noted.

The two brothers are teamed together as makeup artists for Metro Goldwyn Mayer studios and were in Canyon this week at the Las Tiendas beauty salon to work with local women on their beauty problems.

In 1975 the Oscar for makeup and simplicity was won by the Marlins over 37 other makeup artists at national competition.

In January, noted Layne Marlin, the movie crew for "The Bait" will be in the Texas Panhandle (probably Lubbock or Amarillo) to select locations for filming. The movie will be a sequel to the film "The Sting" and is to star James Conner and Anne Baxter.

The Marlin brothers feel that makeup is a science and often refer to themselves as "the face doctors". They agree that there would be a lot fewer divorces in America if the average housewife would spend some time before the mirror each day.

As the top makeup artists of Hollywood, Layne Marlin and his younger brother, Jerry, have been instrumental in 'face doctoring' for such noted Hollywood personalities as Marilyn Monroe, Elizabeth Taylor, Sophia Loren, Mae West, Claudette Colbert, and June Allyson to name a few.

The Marlins have been in the "beauty" business for about 20 years now and note that "men oftentimes object to makeup because it looks like it was put there by a putty knife."

The two makeup artists feel that the soft natural look is best for all women.

And speaking on beauty they noted that "foods play an important role in beauty" for the figure and complexion of both men and women.

The two makeup artists, who have also worked on numerous male movie stars such as Robert Taylor, Clark Gable and Elvis Presley, will be demonstrating their art for local residents next week at the Las Tiendas beauty salon.

And on December 13, the two will demonstrate and lecture at a public seminar at the American Hairdressers School in Amarillo. The program, which begins at 7 p.m., will follow the theme "Life and Beauty Begin at 40".

Layne Marlin, makeup artist for Metro Goldwyn Mayer studios, gives an approving look to Monette Merriman's style of makeup and allows her to hold the "Oscar."

This is the second fire at the warehouse in recent weeks. Lehnick said the cause of the blaze has not been determined.

Thanksgiving Marriage Vows Read For Miss Matthis-Sweatt

Miss Roseanna Elizabeth Matthis and Michael Raymond Sweatt were married in double ring ceremonies on Thanksgiving Day at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David R. Matthis, at No. 14 Country Club Drive in Canyon.

Rev. Father Jack Gist of St. Ann's Catholic Church in Canyon officiated at the exchange of vows and Mrs. Don McCartor of Amarillo presented traditional classical and wedding music at the piano including the bride's selection Friendly Persuasion by Dimitri Tiomkin.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Sweatt of Hale Center, Tex. He graduated from Olton High School and attended West Texas State University. He is presently a botany major at Metropolitan State College in Denver, Colo. and employed part-time with a Landscape Architectural Firm.

A graduate of Canyon High School, the bride attended West Texas State University where she majored in Spanish and English. She taught high school Spanish and English for a year in Colorado before accepting her current position with the Metropolitan State College in Denver with the administration department.

The marriage ceremony was performed in the livingroom of the Matthis home where the raised dining area was marked with a white altar cloth on the floor and framed by black wrought iron railings. Floor candelabra framed each side of the altar area which was decorated with greenery, white mums and candles. Prayer pillows of ivory satin with white lace and monograms were embroidered with roses and hearts and made by the bride's mother for the occasion. Fall mums were used on the bride's table and throughout the home.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length wedding gown of ivory chiffon featuring a molded bodice fashioned with beaded re-embroidery and Alencon lace. The dress was designed with an empire waistline and full sleeves which were ruffled at the cuffs. The circular wedding skirt terminated in a flowing chapel length wedding train which was held to a Watteau styled back.

Her fingertip wedding veil featured scallops alternating with Alencon lace and seed pearls and flowed from a cap of matching lace embroidered with seed pearls.

For "something old" the bride carried a lace handkerchief which formerly belonged to the groom's maternal grandmother. For "something new" she wore a pendant of opals and gold leaves on a golden chain which were a gift from the bridegroom. She "borrowed" small gold pendant earrings from her sister-in-law, Mrs. Michael Matthis, and wore the traditional blue satin garter. In her shoe the bride had a penny minted in 1951, the year of her birth, which was presented to her by the bridegroom's mother. She also carried a small white Bible which had been presented to her at birth by her parent's Sunday School Class in Ada, Okla.

Attending the bride as the matron of honor was Mrs. Gregg Sweatt of Denver, Colo. She wore a rust silk knit empire styled dress edged with ecru crochet and carried a wicker basket filled with bronze and yellow mums featuring dried star flower accents.

Gregg Sweatt of Denver, the bridegroom's brother, served as best man.

A three-tiered white wedding cake accented with yellow roses and green leaves and topped with wedding bells and a dove was served at the reception following the ceremony. The bride and bridegroom cut the cake with a silver knife and drank wedding toasts from crystal glasses belonging to the bride's maternal grandmother.

The houseparty serving for the reception wore formal dresses of autumn colors and had corsages of velvet and satin flowers accented with green leaves and dried star flowers which were arranged on half-circles of ivory tulle and tied with narrow velvet ribbons. The ribbons were holding small gold wedding rings and were arranged by the bride's mother for the occasion.

In the houseparty were Mrs. Lee Roy Moreland, Mrs. Sam Steen, Mrs. Frank Shropshire, Mrs. Cruse Snyder, Mrs. Bernadette Teichman, Mrs. Ken Waugh, Mrs. George Ritter, Mrs. Michael Martin and Miss Debra Sweatt.

After a wedding trip to Taos, N.M., the couple will be establishing their home at 1305 E. 13th St., Apt. 2, in Denver. For travel the bride changed to a beige knit pantsuit edged and trimmed with black silk braid and complemented with a black blouse and accessories.

The ceremony was confirmed before the altar which was lit with the "presence light" of the church and framed by matching urns of red roses and mums and altar candle arrangements. Be Thou My Vision was presented by the organist, Cortez Dowlen, with the soloist, Brenda Thomas, presenting Now Thank We All Our God.

Miss Brenda Wilhite, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor and the bridesmatron was Mrs. Charles McFarland. They wore dresses of burgundy trimmed with ecru lace and carried lighted candles in red votive cups surrounded by red rose arrangements.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal wedding gown of candlelite silk organza over bridal taffeta designed with a fitted empire bodice. Her high victorian neckline was framed by cluny lace and the sheer rounded yoke of English net was enhanced by embroidery at center front. Venise lace in a floral design enhanced the bodice which was framed by a band of cluny lace with a satin ribbon accent. The sleeves were full with a bishop styling and terminated in deep lace cuffs at the wrist. The A-line skirt was framed with bands of lace and swept to back fullness above the lace edged full flounce. She wore a matching camelot cap of cluny lace which held the illusion chapel length wedding veil, framed by lace. A separate blusher veil was attached.

A tiered wedding cake featuring red roses on the top tier and between the tiers was served at the reception following in the church parlor.

Festivities-Amusements Theme Of Sue Hite Meet

Sue Hite Club members met in the home of Mrs. Huelyn Laycock, 2619 Fourth Avenue, for their November 24 meeting. Upon arrival members were served tea, coffee, dessert breads, and olive cheese puffs from a festive bar.

Following refreshments, Frances Holman, president, called the meeting to order and presided over the business session.

Edith Priddy, in the absence of Betty Stoker, program chairman, introduced Alma Perkins and Beulah Miller who gave a program on, "Early Festivities and Amusements."

Seated at a table piled high with books containing stories of life in the early days, Alma and Beulah searched for information of early festivities and amusements. Freshly baked bread and a pot of tea made their task more pleasurable.

They found that most often it was work that brought these early settlers together but they did have a genius for turning their work into occasions for fun. There were the traditional log-rollings, house and barn-raisings, and corn shuckings.

Entire families came for these events. The women would visit as they prepared good hearty meals for the men. When they had finished in the kitchen, they would quilt and do beautiful needlework. It was not uncommon for them to turn out a quilt in one afternoon.

The children had great times at these gatherings. They played such games as hide and seek, blackman, London Bridge, marbles, and mumble peg.

Perhaps a corn shucking was one of the most enjoyable occasions. The corn was piled high, and hidden somewhere near the bottom of the pile was a jug of liquor. Each man was eager to find the jug and each young man was eager to find a red ear of corn as this allowed him to kiss the young girl of his choice. My, how the shucks would fly over one shoulder and the corn over the other!

Then there were plum pickings, taffy pullings and dancing. The dances were usually ring games and a fiddler made the music. The children would fall asleep on pallets here and there, but the young people — and some not so young — might dance until the early morning hours.

Even a funeral provided an opportunity for some socializing. People would come from miles around bringing food and whatever else was needed for an overnight stay. There was much visiting and reminiscing as they prepared the body, made the box, sat with the dead, dug the grave and finally carried the body to the graveyard and buried it.

Alma and Beulah were quite engrossed in their search for information when suddenly they realized that it was time for Beulah to keep another appointment, so they concluded their program by wishing everyone a Happy Thanksgiving and the meeting was adjourned.

Faculty Council Meet To Hear Malzahn Report

The West Texas State University Faculty Council, which called a week ago for a holding action on the part of teachers at the university, will meet in special session Monday afternoon with Academic Vice President Ray Malzahn.

Malzahn said the substance of the meeting will be discussion of action taken Tuesday by the university Tenure and Promotion Committee in response to council complaints concerning the use of student evaluations of faculty in determining merit for promotion, tenure and raises.

The News learned Friday that the university-wide tenure and promotion committee voted Tuesday that in their considerations of faculty members for tenure and promotion a department chairman evaluation will account for 25 per cent of the weight to be given in assessing a teacher's effectiveness.

The committee, also voted, the News learned, that peer evaluation, ex-student evaluation and student evaluation would count no more than 75 per cent of the total weight to be used in assessing a faculty member's teaching effectiveness.

Members of the Faculty Council had asked in a resolution passed two weeks ago that the tenure and promotion committee assign a weight of no more than 50 per cent to student evaluations of faculty when assessing teaching effectiveness.

This action spurred a hot resolution in late November from the Faculty Council, which called on the faculty to ask their department heads to hold completed student evaluation forms at the department level without sending them forward for processing.

The holding action was asked of the faculty until the council and the tenure and promotion committee could come to some agreement on the issue.

During the Monday meeting, Malzahn is expected to present the committee action for review by the council.

The meeting will be at 3 p.m. in room 116 of the university complex south.

Dr. Walter L. Shelly is chairman of the council.

Local Cancer Unit Sets Goal Of $6450

Did You Know That. . . ?

Canyon is the only community in northwest Texas that has full Southern Association accreditation on all school campuses.

Standardized test results indicate that Canyon students of all ages are well above national average achievement.

More than seventy-three percent of the Canyon Independent School District total budget is allocated for instruction of boys and girls.

More than half of the professional employees hold Masters' degrees and that many have college work above that level.

The local schools have received commendation from the state education agency for course development and coordinated planning.

About eighty percent of the 1975 Canyon High School graduates indicated plans for continuing education.

At the present time, three state-approved innovative and exemplary programs are operating in Canyon schools.

The community education program of the Canyon ISD is presenting serving 262 citizens of the district. Since its beginning, about 900 have participated in that program.

Sixty percent of Randall County residents are high school graduates, a higher percentage than that of any other county in Texas. In state ratings, Randall County holds first place in educational level.

The designs for the proposed elementary school call for flexibility and adaptability that will provide for future growth and possible new trends in education, but the plans now call for a traditional teacher-and-student arrangement, with emphasis on meeting the needs of each child.

Nine portable classrooms are in full-time use on Canyon school campuses, and early childhood education classes at Gene Howe School are held in a nearby church. At the present time, construction is being done to provide kindergarten and early education classrooms for Rex Reeves students in the Central Administration Building.

The average class size of literature classes in Canyon High School is thirty-two.

In bad weather, physical education classes at Gene Howe School are conducted in the cafeteria.

Contrary to national trends of decreasing population, Canyon schools continue to grow. Some elementary classes have enrollments of twenty-nine and thirty children.

In high school, there are two boys' physical education classes — one of fifty students, one of forty students — who use a 12' x 24' dressingroom and have access to four shower heads. This room is also the dressingroom for visiting girls' basketball teams.

Daily, twenty-two school buses transport more than 1,600 students. Annually, school bus transportation amounts to more than 350,000 miles.

In junior and senior high schools, some teachers do not have their own classrooms, and it is necessary for them to use rooms which are empty only during other teachers' planning periods. In both elementary schools, teachers share classrooms during part or all of the day.

The Canyon Independent School District consists of 713 square miles. It extends north to Potter County, east to Armstrong County, south to Swisher County, and west to Deaf Smith County.

Residents of that entire area pay their school taxes to Canyon ISD. More than forty-one percent of the revenues come from the northern part of the district; about fifty-eight percent from the southern part of the district.

The proposed bond issue amount of $6 million includes provisions for inflation and standard educational furnishings and equipment in the new buildings proposed by the bond issue and in remodeling of the present high school.

It is legally impossible to cede residential property to another school district without a petition from a majority of the residents.

Under the present state funding plan, an updating of property values and reappraisal of the Canyon ISD tax structure is necessary, regardless of the bond issue.

Randall County statistics indicate the smallest poverty percentage in the state. Considering married couples twenty-five years of age or older, Randall County has the second highest average per capita income in the state.

A Town Hall meeting for discussion of the proposed bond issue will be held at the Junior High School auditorium Tuesday, December 2, at 7:30 PM.

Buffs Open Season Monday In Amarillo

West Texas State University and Panhandle State University collide on the floor of the Amarillo Civic Center Coliseum Monday night (Dec. 1), and the Buffs of Coach Ron Ekker hope the game is a good reflection of the series thus far between the two Panhandle institutions.

WTSU has won 22 of the 25 games in the rivalry that dates back to 1929, and the Buffs won last year's game by a handy 89-69 margin. The names and faces from that game will be very familiar.

For the Buffs, Reggie Ramey, Maurice Cheeks and Eugene Smith all had exceptional games against the PanAggies a year ago, while Coach John Smith's PSU team was led by guards Russell Dickson and Jeff Clayton, and forward Willie Reese. All are back for Monday night's game.

"They apparently have about the same team as last year," Ekker surmised. "They have a fine player in Reese: he did an excellent job against us last year. They also have two fine guards who played very well against us last year."

While the Aggies will bring an improved team into the Civic Center this year, Ekker still must place most of his concern on his own team. After all, it is WT's season opener.

"At this stage I'm more concerned with ourselves and preparing ourselves than we are about any opponent we must face," he explained.

Cheeks, Ramey, and Eugene Smith will be joined by 6-10 senior Dallas Smith and 6-4 junior college transfer Melvin Jones on the floor for the opening tipoff Monday, though the Buff depth this year could be the best ever.

"We feel very strongly that we could start that combination, or start Brad Schreck, Milt Henderson, or Bobby Anderson in that lineup and not be hurt at all," he added. "It just appears to us to be the best lineup to begin a game with because it gives us more flexibility to come off the bench with those other players."

Schrek, a little recruited 6-6 forward from Independence, Kans., Community College, has been the star of the Buffs' two preseason intrasquad scrimmages. In Tuesday's Maroon-White game, he hit 10 of 15 from the field and four straight from the free throw line for 24 points.

Among the veterans, Dallas Smith could be the team's biggest star. In the last intrasquad game, the Des Moines, Iowa, senior hit 10 of 12 from the field for 20 points, and led the rebounding with seven.

"Dallas has improved his offense and rebounding considerably," Ekker praised. "He has always been a fine defensive player, but this year he's scoring well from the field, and this has made him a well-rounded player."

Then there is Ramey, only 207 points away from a new school scoring record. "Reggie has proved himself the past three years in the Valley," Ekker went on. "He's always been a strong offensive contributor, but we are also hoping that this year we don't need it as much this year because we want to have better balance."

Following the PSU opener, the Buffs continue their premiere homestand Thursday (Dec. 4) against Southwestern Oklahoma State and on Saturday (Dec. 6) against Oklahoma Baptist University.

Letter To The Editor

Reader Mad At Board

Dear Editor,

The men on the school board as individuals I would not question their word. As a group they have not been truthful to me and Lena Seals.

I, with Lena, presented a signed petition with names as prescribed by state law to the city and county commissioners at their respective regular meetings. The city and county commissioners decided to allow the $3,000 homestead exemption to persons over 65 years of age that was asked for in the petition. This was in accordance to the wishes of the people of this district who voted for the exemption in the state-wide election.

The school board with their usual unanimous front told Lena and me that we would be advised of their decision after they consulted with their attorney regarding the legality of the school board allowing the $3,000 exemption.

Mr. Elton Cox is the attorney for the city and the Canyon Independent School District.

Perhaps the school board can have their attorney answer two more questions along with the unanswered petition.

Is it legal for the Canyon School Board to use the school funds supplied by the district and federal taxpayers to brainwash voters for or against an issue?

Can the school board use the names of committees appointed by the board for the purpose of studying and observing the needs of school children for public endorsement of something the school board voted they want done, without first receiving the permission of each committee member?

Citizens that have contributed to the education of one and two generations are entitled to rest for the few remaining years of their lives.

We should be glad and helpful to the citizens that have the will to provide for their retirement and are avoiding dependency on the community, instead of taxing them into poverty. If we have affluent citizens over 65 years old we should be grateful and honor them for they are the ones that will provide even after death, the state inheritance tax will gobble up a great hunk of the estate left.

The state is teachers, schools, children, you and I.

Sorry but I do not have faith in this unanimous school board that disregards the petition of the people.

Sincerely,

be taken to provide ample facilities to accommodate athletic activities. Necessarily there must be a core of coaches to so select, teach, and train the most promising students in order to harvest a lion's share of honor, glory and praise for themselves and the school, in the area of physical contest.

The money not needed to take care of the above-mentioned items will probably be used to establish office space for the administrative and clerical staff and classrooms. The teachers, doubtless will be charged with the responsibility of maintaining at least a semblance of order and keeping records and making reports. With the time they have after these things are cared for, they are expected to impart a comprehensive knowledge and understanding of the subject matter encountered in each course of study. The fact that many students may be only mildly concerned, some totally indifferent, and others entirely lacking in ability to cope with the problems embodied in the grade level which they occupy, does not altogether excuse them (the teachers) from bringing the students' scholastic achievements up to a passing grade. But whether or not this goal is reached few, if any, students are to be retained. To do so might embarrass the parents and tarnish the child's scholastic record thereby causing him, or her, to develop an inferiority complex.

Yet, thank God, there will be some — I fear the number quite small — who will devote heart and mind to the task of learning, despite the fact there may be little notice taken of their achievements, no public applause, yells and songs to cheer them, no ribbons to identify them as winners, and no thrilling writeups and pictures in the papers to reward their efforts. About the only reward for them — though it is not noticed, it is not small — is the knowledge they hold within their own breasts that their time was well spent and their parents' and the taxpayers' money was not wasted. These are the true heroes of our public schools. And judging from my small experience and what I have been able to glean elsewhere, I am convinced their number, percentage-wise, is steadily growing smaller, year by year. If the picture I have herein tried to paint is a fair portrayal — and I believe it is — of the package we are being offered under the label of Quality Education, is it really worth six million dollars, plus the thousands it will cost to staff and maintain? Does the label truly represent the contents of the package?

How do the high school graduates of today compare, academically, with those of yester years when debating teams, orators, theme writers, declaimers and all those ranking high in academic circles were depended on to win and hold the honors for themselves and their schools? How many of our graduates of today can write beautifully or even altogether legibly? How many can prepare a paper expressing their thoughts logically, in proper sequence, with few, if any, words misspelled? How many possess a vocabulary that is clean, clear, and not tainted with vulgarity? How many can read with clarity, injecting accents and expressions that make listening to them enjoyable?

I do not mean to imply there ever was a time or generation that produced a student body that reached the peak of academic perfection. I do believe, however, there was a time when teachers were not so cumbered with extra duties that they had insufficient time to devote to teaching; and that students had a greater incentive to learn; and as a result, true Quality Education was more nearly attained.

Somehow or another I got the crazy notion that school buildings contribute little or nothing to student achievement, other than providing comfortable classrooms, properly lighted, where youngsters are exposed to the right sort of text books and dedicated teachers with sufficient time to instruct them. Of course it is essential that space and equipment be provided for those interested in vocational and scientific pursuits.

It matters not how adequately all these things are supplied, Quality Education, may it be concluded, can only be secured to the extent the individual student is dedicated to the purpose of obtaining it. Though it constitutes a very worthy possession of those who obtain it, yet, it cannot be given away, bought, sold, or stolen. It comes to those, only, who diligently and persistently seek it. If one wants it enough, it is difficult to keep it from him. If he does not want it, it cannot be forced upon him. So, be it concluded that the greatest contribution to Quality Education, is a responsibility resting on the shoulders of parents, educational institutions and the general public, to stimulate an incentive to learn in the minds of children; inspiring them to choose and search for knowledge of things that permanently add to their sense of well being and make of them an asset to society that fadeth not away when the bands cease playing and the voice of the applauding spectators is hushed.

One's physical and pleasurable activities may contribute to efficiency in learning so long as they do not capture the purpose of classroom attendance; but when sports so captivate the minds of students and their parents that they (sports) take precedent over all other subjects, in school or out, it is then, I sincerely believe they become a deterrent to Quality Education. To what extent has this condition developed in our public schools? It appears to me it has reached a point where the tail is wagging the dog. If this is true, then it might be wise to perform a financial operation on the tail in order that the dog might proudly wag it again. I would not advocate chopping the thing off entirely, but I do favor channeling some of the fat to the old dog's body to the extent that his ribs will not show through his hide, and that he might be held in higher esteem by those who feed him.

I do not begrudge any money I pay as taxes to support Quality Education so long as the phrase is used to express the portion of our public school programs that tend to extend the mental, moral, spiritual, and physical horizons of our children, helping to make of them men and women whose personal lives are enriched, and whose contribution to society will be generous and worthwhile. Any other part of the program that discredits, hinders, dwarfs, or starves the first mentioned portion, I am opposed to.

Let no one be deceived in thinking that he will be exempt from an additional, financial burden if this bond issue passes. Everyone who buys merchandise in the county will doubtless contribute, directly or indirectly, to the retirement of these bonds. The additional cost in taxes incurred by the merchant will add to his cost of operation; and must be followed by a raise in the price of his goods if he is to maintain his margin of profit.

I am glad that I can truthfully say and prove, that I have not raised the price of my rental units since they were first occupied six to ten years ago, despite the tremendous price increase of most everything else. Over extending financial obligations has meant disaster for countless individuals, companies, corporations, businesses, large and small, cities and towns. New York is now writhing in the throes of bankruptcy.

I am glad that I learned long ago to want and be denied; and to do without that which I could not afford.

I do not consider the school boards altogether responsible for the existing shortcomings of our schools as I see them. They (the school boards) are caught between the upper and nether millstones of a demanding public.

C. N. Cosby

and that the listing of their names was unauthorized and unwanted.

It has been confirmed that the conditions and figures outlined as guidelines to these committees were ill-defined and that the resulting reports are therefore untrue and not consistent with the facts in this case.

We insist that the "committee for" admit that they published advertising over a list of names of which they had no authorization and that they also admit that they did so in an effort to mislead and confuse the voters.

We are also appalled at the number of calls we have received advising of a support for a "no vote" in this election but stating that open support is impossible because of probable reprisals of an economic, professional or business nature.

Responsibility and fairness demands defeat of the upcoming bond issue.

News Brief

New ideas for teaching economics will be presented to West Texas State University Department of Economics faculty members Dec. 4 by Dr. Richard Leftwich, chairman of the Oklahoma State University Department of Economics.

mittees were published solely as information for the public. When these ads were submitted to the newspaper, I felt, as I do now, that it was to the public interest that the membership lists be made known so that people could know who took part in the work of the citizens committees and who consequently are in a position to help inform the community about school needs and the coming bond election. The ads in no way implied that all the individuals whose names were listed concurred in any or all of the recommendations submitted to the Board of Education or that they are in favor of the bond issue. I call upon all who served on these committees to encourage every eligible citizen to vote according to his convictions on December 9.

back, and sometimes on foot.

The new land demanded men and women of steel, with iron for backbones. And Nature weeded out any who failed to measure up.

Through the sacrifices of the survivors, America blossomed into the richest, most productive nation on earth.

Arnold Toynbee, the immortal historian, said, "In all of human history no major nation was ever murdered. They all committed suicide!"

America became powerful while Americans were free. Every loss of freedom weakens the fabric of our nation. Many vital strands are already broken.

While we pause to thank God for our heritage and for the blessings we still have, may we ask for wisdom to recognize the suicical tendencies among us, and the courage to combat them while we still have the opportunity.

Voice Recital Scheduled

Joe Dowell, graduate student at West Texas State University from Hobbs, N.M., will be presented in a voice recital at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the WTSU Branding Iron Theatre.

Dowell, a baritone, will sing "Concerte Persone" and "Con un vezzo," by Mozart; "O Lord my darken'd heart enlighten" by Bach; "Les Roses d'Ispahan" and "Recontre" by Faure; and "Romance" and "Fantocher" by Debussy.

Other selections will include "A Maid Me Loved" by Barab, "I Hear an Army" by Barber, "Sonnet 104" by Nash and "Wenn Mein Schatz" by Mahler.

Brahms selections sung by Dowell will be "O Wusst ich doch den weg Zuruck," "O Kuhler Wald" and "Meine Liebe ist grun."

Dowell will sing "Three Odes of Solomon" by Hovahness which includes "No way is hard," "As the work of the husbandman" and "As the wings of doves."

Dowell, corresponding secretary for Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, is a student of Elsa Porter, assistant professor of music.

He has been a soloist in the summer musical "Texas" for two years and has played roles of Coppelius in "Tales of Hoffman," Figaro in "Marriage of Figaro," Schaunard in "La Boheme" and Sir Joseph Porter and Captain Corcoran in "H.M.S. Pinafore" at WTSU.

Dowell is the son of Mrs. Katherine Dowell.

The Lon Fannings have returned from a ten day trip to South Texas where they visited with a number of relatives. Mrs. Fanning and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Artie Walker of Amarillo, travelled together to Houston where they were joined later in the week by Mr. Fanning.

At Clear Lake City the group visited with the Fannings' daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Davis, and with their children, Robyn, John and Jason. The Fannings' son, Jim, came to visit the group from Wharton Junior College where he teaches.

During their two week visit in the Houston area, the Fannings visited with her sisters, Mrs. L.H. Mapp and Mrs. K.K. Hughes, and were joined by two brothers, Ernest Walker of Abilene, and Mack Walker of Houston for a family gathering.

Four sisters and their families enjoyed a Thanksgiving reunion in Happy.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Miller of Canyon, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Brown of a ranch north of Amarillo, Mr. and Mrs. Taft Reynolds of Tulia gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Wilcox of Happy for the family meal.

With them also were Mr. and Mrs. Lee Wilcox and Matthew, and the Brown's son, Joe, of Borger.

This was the first time the sisters have shared a Thanksgiving since their childhood, Mrs. Miller said, and they plan another get-together soon.

It was a grateful Thanksgiving for the W.B. Castlemans, whose year-old grandson recently spent several days in the hospital, gravely ill with a virus.

Ty Weis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Weis of Pampa, was much better by Wednesday and was scheduled to be home for the holidays.

The holidays have been moving day for Dr. S.J. Remlinger and his family. Dr. Remlinger, who opened his chiropractic office here this summer, has been living in Amarillo until they could find a house in Canyon.

Speaking of moving, I would not be surprised to find that this column is paint spattered. Everything else I've touched for the past month has been, as we are moving too, and have been redecorating.

Michener Mentions McClure

"Do not allow your artists to portray these cowboys as big men. Most of the good ones were slight. Boone McClure of that admirable Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum just south of Amarillo is my authority for the statement: 'We had this convocation of famous living cowboys, and three were picked as the most representative. I'm only five-feet-six and every one of those men was no taller than I.' " That's the way James Michener, author of the "Centennial" credits the long-time museum director for his assistance.

Michener spent one day touring the museum about two years ago, according to McClure. "I remember him as a very bright, inquisitive man," recalls McClure. "He, his research assistant and secretary looked at each exhibit case in the Museum's front room and had a question about nearly every artifact," says McClure.

McClure said Michener sent the chapter concerning cowboys to him for his comments after his visit.

Community Meeting Tuesday

The second of two community meetings sponsored by the Canyon School Board to answer questions concerning the Dec. 9 $6 million bond issue election will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the junior high.

Only about 50 persons showed up last Tuesday for the first of the town-hall-style meetings at the junior high.

Canyon School Board members have cancelled their regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday to attend the community meeting.

Brief presentations concerning the need for new schools and the plans for a $6 million bond issue to finance them will be given by Supt. Jerry Jacobs and Board President Tom Keeling.

Then, the floor will be opened to questions.

The Tuesday night hearing is expected to be among the final actions taken by a publicity committee formed by the school board to get out the facts on the proposed construction projects.

Since August, the committee has produced a brochure which has been mailed to all taxpayers in the school district and has produced a question-and-answer sheet which has gone out to all parents of school children.

In addition, the committee has produced a slide presentation for civic groups and organizations.

Another committee, the Citizens Committee for Quality Education, headed by John Reeves of Canyon, has taken the responsibility for producing pro-bond issue materials for publication and for distribution.

A Citizens Revolt Committee, headed by Stan Collins of Canyon, is against the bond issue and held a sparsely attended meeting two weeks ago.

Chamber To Eye WT Athletics

Directors of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce are expected to discuss Monday night whether to send a delegation before the West Texas State University board of regents Friday to protest possible downgrading of the university's athletic program.

Roland Black, chamber manager, said Friday he's been approached by several local businessmen who have called on the chamber to take a stand against downgrading of athletics at the university.

He said he expects it to be discussed at the regular Monday session of the chamber board.

Regents are to meet in special session Friday to discuss the fiscal underpinnings of the university's athletic offerings. University officials have denied that downgrading of the programs is the only option or alternative which is being considered.

Black said it appears representatives of Amarillo chamber of commerce and other groups may appear before the regents to plead for stablization of the athletic program at its current level with memberships in the NCAA and the Missouri Valley Conference.

The chamber board in the past has hesitated to take a stand on another issue of local concern, whether the Canyon School District should act to cede several sections of land just south of Amarillo to the Amarillo School District.

But, they have also taken stands on other issues, such as the vote in June 1974 on construction of a new city hall complex for the City of Canyon.

Besides the athletic department at the university, chamber directors will face the problem Monday night of trying to find a speaker for their annual chamber banquet, which is generally held in January or February.

Ronald Reagan, now a candidate for the Presidential nomination in the Republican Party, declined last week an invitation to speak at the banquet.

Black said Friday the chamber board may consider inviting Dr. Heartsill Wilson, speaker at this year's banquet, to return for the upcoming banquet.

Chamber directors will also elect new officers for the 1976 year during the Monday session.

fourths of the salaries of athletic coaches. If that were added to the expenditure side, the total expenditures for the year would be around $880,000 and the projected deficit in the program would be more than $300,000 for the year.

Even excluding the instructional salary figures, the athletic program will be in the red by $175,000 without bonded indebtedness figures.

Bonded indebtedness required to service bonds issued for construction of the Kimbrough Memorial Stadium will add another $23,500 to the deficit.

Salaries and wages account for $118,463 of the expenditures in the budget; scholarships account for $175,640; travel accounts for $173,300; and other supplies and expenses account for $284,040.

Miller said state law prohibits the use of certain funds for intercollegiate athletics.

"We have essentially three kinds of funding," he said. "state education and general funding which are not affected by this. These are strictly for teaching functions. Then, the building fund from which we are building the new fine arts building and this is well funded.

"Then, the auxiliary fund, which includes all student service fees, the book store and this is the group that's having problems."

said.

Hightower said he will announce for re-election to the office he's held for less than a year around Feb. 1.

He was first elected congressman from this district in November 1974 by beating incumbent Bob Price of Pampa.

Since that time, Price has indicated he might don the GOP mantle to seek to unseat the Democratic Hightower in the 1976 general election.

$7500 more for six campuses than for four campuses with 4000 students, Jacobs said. That would include the local payment of $2000 for each principal's salary paid by the district above the state schedule, $4000 for secretarial expense, $1000 for supplies, $500 for repairs.

*Counsellors would cost an additional $2100 if 4000 students were located on six campuses rather than four, he said. That includes the local payment for salaries above the state schedule, $1200 for a clerk, and $400 for supplies.

*A school nurse would cost about $2000 more for six campuses than for four, he said.

*Transportation costs could be cut by about $20,000, Jacobs said, if the district operated six campuses rather than four.

*Co-curricular activities, including athletics, choir and band, would cost the district about $25,000 more for six campuses than for four, he said. That includes supplies, equipment and the amount the district pays above the state salary schedule.

*General administration would cost no more for six campuses than for four, he said.

*Plant operation and maintenance, Jacobs said, could be expected to increase by about $35,000 for the six campuses rather than four. That includes hikes in insurance which would be needed for two new campuses, and salaries for new custodians.

Noting that the anticipated 1979 budget of about $5 million would include only about $113,000 for the difference in costs between operations on four campuses as opposed to operations on six campuses, Jacobs said he feels the expenditure would be justified.

"I think we can justify the cost, due to the better educational facilities and opportunities and the co-curricular opportunities," he said.

failed to allege that Randall County contributions to the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission have been spent for other than valid governmental purposes, or the nature of any such expenditures claimed to be for unlawful or improper purposes," the answer says.

Other exceptions pertain to the residency of the plaintiffs and their ability to sue or have standing to sue.

In the original petition filed by Todd and others, it is alleged that the law passed by the state allowing the formation of regional planning commissions is contrary to the U.S. Constitution.

The plaintiffs also allege that participation in the planning commissions is illegal unless authorized by an election.

Mature WT Women To Have Seminars

Job placement and vocational testing, two of the most asked questions by older-than-average women returning to college, will open a series of informal brown-bag luncheons Wednesday and Thursday at West Texas State University.

Sponsored by the WTSU Women's and Senior Citizens Advisory Committee, the luncheons are designed "to meet the needs and interests of the student population," according to Dr. Enid Bates, committee chairman.

Dr. Kenneth Waugh, director of the Center for Testing, Academic and Career Counseling, will speak on "Services Available for Vocational Testing and Counseling" Dec. 3 beginning at noon.

Director of Placement Gene Parker will follow Dec. 4 at 12:30 p.m. with "Employment Opportunities for Women."

The luncheons will be held in Room 126 of the WTSU Activities Center, and are open to all interested women.

This would be an excellent time for women who are considering enrolling in college to come and visit," Dr. Bates said. "We have planned these brown-bag luncheons to give these non-traditional students an opportunity to meet their peers and also to learn more about what services the University can offer them."

If there is enough interest in the luncheons, the committee plans to sponsor them each month with topics such as investments, understanding football, how to work with men and how to relax.

Women having further questions concerning transportation or additional information should contact Dr. Enid Bates at WTSU, or the following women in area towns: Hereford, Mrs. Raymond Aguilar; Panhandle, Mrs. Marshall Sherwood; and Amarillo, Mrs. Karl Stephenson.

War Panel To Discuss Military Strategy At Session

Two seminars on current issues within the military will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 3, at West Texas State University by the Army War College Current Affairs Panel from Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania.

The seminars on Wednesday will be at 2:30 p.m. in Room 206 of the Activities Center and at 7:30 p.m. in the Activities Center ballroom. The academic community and others interested in the subject are invited to either panel program.

The panel consists of five students and a U.S. Army War College faculty moderator and is an opportunity for an exchange of views for students of the Army War College, who are spending a year in study at a military educational institution, with students and faculty from civilian academic institutions on topics of mutual concern in the area of national security affairs.

Now in its seventh year, the panel presentation begins with a brief identification of several current defense issues and continues with discussion of areas including current strategy, military justice matters, the volunteer Army, material and budgetary considerations, regional concerns and social problems within the Army.

Panel members include Col. Donald P. Shaw, member of the Department of National and International Security Studies at the War College. A 1954 graduate of West Point, he holds degrees in public administration from Harvard and in political science from Pennsylvania State University.

LTC William F. Carroll, Corps of Engineers, hold MS and PhD. degrees in civil engineering from the University of Illinois. He has served in the U.S., West Germany, Korea and South Vietnam.

LTC William R. Lee, Infantry, served recently as executive officer to the commander of U.S. Army in Europe. A graduate of Wilberforce University, he is completing requirements for a master's degree in public administration.

LTC Donald S. Pihl, Armor, has served as military assistant to the Secretary of the Army. He is an industrial relations graduate of the University of California and earned a master's degree in marketing from Berkeley in 1964.

LTC Robert S. Poydasheff, Judge Advocate Generals Corps, is a graduate of the Citadel, with a bachelor's degree in political science, a master's degree in international relations from Boston University and a juris doctorate from Tulane. In addition, he studied at The Hague Academy of International Law.

LTC William G.T. Tutle, Jr., Transportation Corps, is a graduate of West Point with a master's degree from Harvard Business School. He most recently commanded a battalion in Germany.

Story Interpretation Set

Christopher Cole, a junior at West Texas State University, will present "Joseph and Potifer's Wife Through History" as this week's Friday Forum.

The Forum will begin at noon in the Episcopal Center.

Cole will use a lecture with readings from Egypt, Rome, Persia and modern Germany to show the many ways Joseph's Biblical story has been treated by writers through the ages.

"Each writer leaves his mark on a story by adding his own elements," Cole says.

He will also illustrate how various cultures interpret the story.

Cole lives at 1540 Parr Street, Amarillo.
